

33 → 7 BC

CHENGDI was Emperor of China

33 BC

Augustus was Consul (2nd time)

3: BC

Augustus closed ^{over} the open drain known as the CLOACA MAXIMA.

It had been built by the Etrusean kings and cut through the middle of the city.

It was an open drain for 6 centuries, this work was carried out because of the smell. The tunnel

a house and lots of themself
way of money - long car paper

33BC

Agnipa accepted aedileship

338c

Cirrus maximus

Aquilla set up 7 bronze dolphins at the opposite end of the spina to perform the function of counting laps (formerly done with eggs).

Jan 1, -32 = Jan 1, 33 BC ^{Astionomy} (not history)

$$(6664 - 1984)(365,25) = 1709370$$

$$JAN. 0 - 32 = Dec 31, -31 \approx 1709369$$

33BC

DURANT

In his year as aedile Agrippa had won the public's favor by opening 170 public baths, distributing free oil and salt, and presenting games on 55 successive days, and providing free barbers for all citizens for a year - apparently all at his own expense. His ability might have and learn a second language. He pursued his career professionally from a secondary school until he was selected by the University of Edinburgh as an assistant lecturer. He graduated with a first class honours in classical literature and obtained the position of lecturer in classical literature at the University of Glasgow, and then he spent two years abroad, first in Spain, and then in Bosporus, to see the East, and then in America, to see the West. He then came back to England, and spent some time in London, and then he settled in Edinburgh, where he taught classical literature at the University.

33BC

In his year as aedile (33BC) Agrippa had won the public to Octavian by opening 170 public baths, distributing free oil and salt, presenting games for 55 successive days, and providing free barbers for all citizens for a year apparently all at his own expense. His ability might have made him another Caesar, but he preferred to serve Augustus for a generation. So far as we know, his life was unstained by public or private scandal.

Roman gossip left him untouched. He was the 1st Roman to realize the importance of sea power. He planned, built, and commanded the fleet, defeated Sextus Pompey, suppressed piracy and won a victory for Augustus at Actium. After these victories and his pacification of Spain, Gaul
and the Bosphorus kingdom, was twice offered a triumph and always refused. He contented to live without luxury, and devoted himself to public works as he had done to the preservation of the state.

33 BC

DURANT

Octavian was Consul.

33BC

DURANT

There were 170 public baths in Rome (privately owned)

33BC

Agricola agreed to be made aedile and without taking anything from the public treasury repaired all the public buildings and all the streets, cleaned out the sewers and sailed through them underground into the Tiber. Furthermore he distributed olive oil and salt to all